COME STUDY THE DOUBLE BASS WITH WORLD-RENOWNED BASSIST

CAMERON BROWN

In addition to a sixty year career at the top of the jazz world, Cameron Brown has pursued and enjoyed teaching in Rockland County and New York City for the past 15+ years.

Helping elementary school students move through the grades from proficiency to excellence on the bass has been a profoundly rewarding, often thrilling experience. His students attain a knowledge of and a love for music which is a gift that lasts a lifetime.

Recent students have full scholarships at the Eastman School of Music and at SUNY Fredonia. Past students are graduates of the Boston Conservatory, the Berklee School of Music and one has a Masters of Bass Performance degree from the Manhattan School of Music.

Mr. Brown has consistently helped Rockland County sophomores and juniors attain level VI NYSSMA scores in the high 90's with a few reaching perfect evaluations. Three students have gone to the All-State Festival — one of them in both the classical and jazz categories.

He also has many adult students and teaches at the New School for Jazz and Contemporary Music in Manhattan.

Cameron Brown studied with Frank Sinco (Detroit Symphony), Diana Gannett (U. of Iowa, U. of Michigan and star student of Gary Carr), as well as jazz greats Ron Carter and Dave Holland.

He holds a BA from Columbia University.

You can find him on Wikipedia and in the “musicians’ files” at:
